CHIMNEYS KEEP FIREMEN BUSY

Six chimney fires were handled for the week ending Wednesday. One call to Welchville at 3:10 Thursday morning, was not completed as the fire truck was stopped before reaching that hamlet. The blaze was put out.

The chemical was called to Tim Heath's house late Wednesday afternoon, where flames were streaming several feet skyward from a chimney.

On Saturday, a call at 9 a. m. sent firemen to Arthur Herrick's house on Winter Street. At 7:15 p. m., the chimney at American Legion showered sparks on surrounding buildings and the high school yard. This was extinguished with several gallons of chemical.

The hottest and most stubborn chimney blaze for some time was at Porter Swift's house in the edge of Oxford. In this case the pumper responded to the phone call, Sunday morning at 7:30. Fire was roaring the entire length of the chimney and dense smoke filled a blind attic. A hole was chopped through the roof to allow an investigation which showed a serious fire in the attic was in the making. The company worked until 9 o'clock and used the contents of the 80 gallon booster tank. Damage was confined to the roof and estimated at $25.00.

It is common knowledge that every reasonable effort must be made to extinguish fires on the premises and save property. A letter to First Assistant A. G. Blaquiere from Commissioner W. D. Spencer, in reply to an inquiry states that under the terms of the Maine Policy the insured shall make all reasonable exertion to save and protect property. If allowed to burn, he can not recover in such cases providing there is proof.

During the year 1932 there were 91 calls, all were still alarms, except five from boxes. Sixteen were out of the corporation.

Basket Ball

Edward Little 26 - Norway High 25

A wild and wooly fracus took place at Auburn Friday night when Jimmy Cole's gamesters rushed the Auburn outfit into a clip that kept the fans in an uproar. It was nip and tuck with Norway going through with a nice crop of floor baskets while Edward Little excelled and won in the free-try court.

Norway led 12-6 at the end of the quarter. Auburn shifted this to 18-15 at the half and led again 23-19 at the third stanza. There were great doings in the final jam with every variety of basketball yanked from the bag of tricks except soft pedal work. It was a wild session in which Norway dumped in three ringers from the field and Edward Little secured a floor basket and a foul shot. Auburn fans and the Norway followers received their money's worth.

MORE LEAGUE TEAMS

Two more basketball teams have entered the Pine Tree League for the second half of the season. The speedy Adams A. A. will star under the name of Portland. Lewiston has retired from the Lewiston-Auburn combination, each will travel alone. Eight teams will fight it out on a revised schedule with the season extended to accomodate extra numbers.

From now on fans in the circuit will have a red hot treat and witness something not far from semi-pro stuff.

Norway-Paris 25; Livermore 24

A wild session in the Pine Tree League at Norway Opera House Saturday night was presented to a crowd of noisy fans by the N. & P. and Livermore combinations.

Both teams are tail enders, but fought a good fight right up to Referee Rowe's final whistle.

The No-Pars hoopsters got away fast and led right through the battle with 14-12 mark at the half. During the furious last quarter, Kip Russell charged with punching Fenwick in the jaw, was chased out of the game by Referee Rowe.

This started a bit of excitement in the balcony for the crowd howled for the other fellow to go too, which was not considered by the referee.

No-Pars 65; Bath 41

The No-Pars started the second half of the winter schedule with a wallop for the Bath outfit at Norway Opera House, Wednesday evening. Norway-Paris opened with a smart lead and dumped in a long string of baskets for a safe margin right through the contest. All dope in the Pine Tree League was upset at the outcome of this game and the Twin Towners start the new series with stocks rising above par.

Sam Martin, the lenghy center for the No-Pars and Stuart of Bath engaged in the manly art of self-defence, both were removed from the surface.

CHARLES MORRILL PACKARD

As announced briefly in the Advertiser, last week, Dr. Charles M. Packard, 83, native of Greenwood, died in his late home in Lawrence, Mass., Jan. 12, after an illness of five weeks. He was the oldest tenant in Central Building on Essex Street, where he had done chiropody for thirty-five years. Prior to his residence in Massachusetts, he worked for the old B. F. Spinney Co., later run a general country store in West Sumner and later at Canton Point.

He was a son of James and Mary (Keene) Packard and of that family Corry Packard, a brother, who lives in California, and Albert Packard, who lives in Lisbon Falls and who recently celebrated his golden wedding anniversary, survive.

Although Mr. Packard lived in Massachusetts, his heart strings were still in his Maine birthplace. As an example, he was a subscriber to the Norway Advertiser year in and year out, the thirty-five years he was away from Maine. He was considered the most consistent "fair goer" in New England, having attended the Norway fair three-quarters of a century. His father took him to the fair away back in the days when the land was young and the exhibition grounds were on Main Street near the Dr. Bradbury residence. A few years ago, while making his annual visit at the Norway fair, he was guest of the Association and High Sheriff W. O. Frothingham introduced him from the stage as the man who had attended every fair for the three-quarters of a century.

In the same manner as he had undying allegiance for Maine so Mr. Packard followed the fraternalism of the Knights of Pythias. He took his degrees in Norway when a young man and for the thirty-five years in Massachusetts was affiliated with the society there. Up to the time of his death, he was a member of the degree team and an officer in his lodge.

He was a charter member of S. Louise Gale Lodge, Knights of Pythias, and was one of the most active members of William B. Gale Lodge, No. 140, Knights of Pythias. He served the latter organization as Chancellor, Prelate, and at the time of his death held the office of Chaplain.

The Lawrence lodge conducted the funeral services at his late home on Saturday, January 14th.

Quiet in manner, never aspiring to a dignified position, Mr. Packard made many friends in Lawrence. He had time to pass a cheery good morning to about everybody on the street. He was a unique man. For instance, Miss Barlow, head of the famous Barlow Jewelry Co., relates how he always stepped in as he passed to work each morning with a cheery "hello" and closed the door before they could answer him. "We didn't want him to buy anything," Mrs. Barlow said, "he was just an old friend to everybody on the street." He never tired of extolling the virtues and skill of Dr. Harry Nevers—a Norway boy who made good in Lawrence.

Following a custom which prevails in the section where he lived the body was placed in its couch the day before the funeral and the front door of his home left unlocked. Husky policemen, elderly men and women, school children and neighbors came in unannounced to pay their final respect. There were men and women from all walks of life, rich and poor, gentiles and catholics, Italians, Irish and Jews, each saying a prayer according to the custom of their own faith before the lighted couch.

Mr. Packard is survived by three children. He was twice married, surviving his second wife 18 months. His daughter, Mrs. Lena P. Gray, cared for him after the death of his wife. There is also Mrs. Lulu P. Gilbert and Harry A. Packard, and grandchildren, Richard Gray and Robert and Priscilla Packard. Burial was at Canton, Sunday afternoon.

A sky-scraping truck broke off a limb of a maple tree in Printing Office Square, Tuesday and damaged another sizable branch of the tree.

Representative Partridge has recommended the appointment of Albert L. Kavanagh as postmaster at Lewiston. It is not expected the nomination will be confirmed in view of the opposition of Democratic Senators to the confirmation of Republicans in his session.

The Browning Reading Club will meet Monday evening, Jan. 23, with the hostess Mrs. Florence Bradbury. The social evening has been postponed. The program will be roll call, current events, classic myths by members, program by Mrs. Alice Stearns.

Rev. Orin Stone, accompanied by a nurse, has arrived from the Maine General Hospital at Portland and is wih his mother, Mrs. Florence Stone, Tucker St. He has been in the hospital, suffering with a spine injury since an auto accident several months ago. Mr. Stone is able to walk out some in pleasant weather.

Mrs. M. Lizzie McAllister, 78, who is making her home with her son, Philip McAllister, fell from an organ stool, Wednesday afternoon and fractured her hip. She was removeed in Spiller's ambulance to the Central Maine General Hospital, shortly after the accident. An X-ray was taken and treatment given. She is reported to be resting comfortably as could be expected.

Norway Woman's Club

Delegates to Federation Meeting—C. E. Campbell Speaker of the Afternoon

The Norway Woman's Club met Tuesday afternoon for an interesting meeting, opening with singing America, with Mrs. Ruth Woodman at the piano. Notice was read of the mid-winter meeting of the Federation of Woman's Clubs, at Augusta, January 26-27. Admiral Peary's daughter, Marie Peary, will be a speaker. The delegates from the Norway Club are Mrs. Edith Bartlett, Mrs. Bessie Hill and Mrs. Alice Stearns; alternates, Mrs. Anna Rheiner, Mrs. Bertha Noyes and Mrs. Florence Bradbury.

The tea committee for the nevt meeting includes Mrs. Maude Decoster, Mrs. Grace Brown, Mrs. Blanche Smith, Mrs. Kate Cummings, Mrs. Geneva Cook, Mrs. Harriet Shepard, Mrs. Doris Jack. Two fine musical numbers were given in a violin trio, by the Misses Irene Tubbs, Elizabeth Ariel and Kermit Wilson, pupils of Miss Marion Haskell, who accompanied them on the piano. They were given a rising vote of thanks.

Mrs. Helen Pendexter, the president, introduced the speaker of the afternoon, Charles E. Campbell, of Portland, from Loring, Short & Harmon, as being well qualified to speak on his subject, "What Is Being Read Today," or "Book Fashions," for in these days when so many books are being published, it is hard to choose the right ones. Mr. Campbell told of some of the new books now in the hands of the publishers that will be watched with interest. He touched on the popular books of history, fiction, biography, non-fiction and juvenile. He mentioned the book recently published by A. Hyatt Verrill, "Barton's Mills," a part of which was laid in Norway, also of Arthur Bartlett's last book, "Pals," both of which have a local interest owing to the authors. Mr. Campbell had many books on exhibition and after the meeting answered many questions regarding them.

A social hour was enjoyed and tea was served. The next meeting, February 7th, will be a musical reading, "The Happy Prince" by Mrs. Esther Tower Anderson, which was written by Oscar Wilde. Mrs. Stella Burnham of South Paris will preside at the piano.

MARRIED FORTY-SEVEN YEARS

Mr. and Mrs. Will E. Decker observed their 47th. wedding anniversary, Tuesday. There was no formal program but a few friends called as Mrs. Decker has been ill with the prevailing grippe. They have resided in Norway about eight years at the Darius Sanborn place which they bought and made numerous changes around the premises.

Both are natives of Sebago and attended the same school. After their marriage in 1885 they settled on a farm in Naples. They lived in Stoneham eleven years, then for a time at North Waterford, moving from there to Norway.

Mr. Decker is an experienced farmer, a good carpenter and can turn his hand to any kind of work. He has built a double tenement house with garages underneath and last summer bored down more than a hundred feet into the solid ledge for pure water as a supply for his premises.

High School

Girls' Basket Ball

Due to an oversight, the girls' basket ball game with Mechanic Falls, on Jan. 6, was omitted from the last issue of this paper. Mechanic Falls girls were a strong and speedy sextet, and in spite of the improvement shown on the Norway team, the home team was beaten 45-25. The line-up for the game was:

Mechanic Falls Girls		Norway Girls
Edwards	rf	Emerson
Raymond	lf	Bradbury
Bailey	cf	Hill
Snow	rg	Pratt
Pike	g	Gallant
Keene	lg	Hunt
Chase	subs	Dunham, Young

Last Friday night, Jan. 13, proved to be more fortunate for the girls, who journeyed to West Paris and they were victorious to the tune of 30-6. The diligent work of the guards kept the home team from scoring more than three baskets during the whole game, and the forwards were quick and accurate on their shots. A few friends and supporters of the team were taken along to fill up the bus and this cheering section helped to make the game more interesting and the team more enthusiastic. The line-up for this game was:

West Paris Girls		Norway Girls
Scribner	rf	Emerson
Hollis	lf	Bradbury
Mann	cf	Hill
McKeen	cg	Hunt
Stearns	rg	Gallant
Liimatta	lg	Young

Subs: Welch, G. Mann, Curtis, Briggs, for West Paris; Dunham, Blaquiere, Noyes, Roberts for Norway.

With the team in its present condition next Friday's game with South Paris should prove to be an interesting one.

Last Wednesday the Eighth Grade girls' team clashed with the Freshman team and won by a score of 22-19. This eighth grade team was a winner from the start and showed promise of some good material. Mr. Rowe was referee and Athalie Perry scored.

MRS. WILLIAM M. WILSON

Mrs. Ina Estelle Crockett Wilson, a resident of Berlin, N. H., for sixty years, passed away January 12 at her home in Berlin.

Mrs. Wilson was born at Norway, Sept. 11, 1853, daughter of David Bartlett Crockett and Laura Swift Crockett and granddaughter of Ephraim and Sally Crockett and of Jonathan and Olive Wilkins Swift. She lived in Norway until she was eight years of age. The family then moved to Island Pond, Vt. She was educated at Gould's Academy in Bethel. On February 26, 1872, she was married to William M. Wilson, who died some years ago.

Mrs. Wilson had enjoyed excellent health until a little over a year ago when she suffered an attack of grippe from which she did not rally rapidly. She was a great reader until her eyesight failed her about two years ago and since that time had kept in touch with current events by having papers and magazine articles read to her.

Funeral services were held from the home, Saturday afternoon, Rev. L. W. Hodder officiated. The bearers were M. B. Carpenter, Timothy Rowe, Joseph Fillion, Charles Parker, A. R. Chapman and David Stafford. Interment in the family lot in the old Berlin cemetery.

GRANGE IN JOINT INSTALLATION

The joint meeting of four granges, South Paris, West Paris, Oxford and Norway, was a pleasant occasion, Saturday.

The meeting opened at 10.30 o'clock for business and was followed by dinner with 125 seated at the tables. Each grange contributed towards the menu.

In the afternoon, the officers of the four granges were installed by Past Master Arthur H. Holman of Norway Grange assisted by Miss Elizabeth Holman and Ernest Moores. Norway had a full quota of officers present, South Paris had nearly all present, but West Paris and Oxford were affected by the epidemic and had a few absent.

After the work, an excellent program was presented and among the numbers were:

Singing ....
Vocal Duet..R. L. Cummings, Mrs. White, of West Paris.
Vocal Solo......Robert Smith, South Paris, accompanied by Miss Titus.
Reading..Miss Martha Kendall, West Paris
Chronicles written by members of Norway Grange, the first written by Mrs. Eva Jackson Pride, and read by Miss Evelyn Brown. The second written and read by Arthur Buck.

The North Road

Continuing Route Twenty-Six

Mr. Waterman's article in the Norway Advertiser of January 26, on "Route Twenty-six" is very true. Possibly many would be interested in continuing this to the north to the farthest settled point in Oxford County. This being one of the most important routes in the state, running almost the whole length of Oxford County, coming through Norway, Bethel and Grafton Notch into Upton, where one of the most beautiful views of the Umbagog Lake can be obtained. Nothing better in Oxford County, and continuing through to Errol, New Hampshire, through Dixville Notch to end at Colebrook, New Hampshire, taking in some of the most beautiful views in that state.

Through the courtesy of the State Highway Commissioners, Route 16 on the New Hampshire side, beginning at Portsmouth, coming up through the White Mountain country along the Androscoggin River to Errol will be mapped this coming season from Errol up through to Wilson's Mills, as a main branch of this route.

Should the resolve that will be brought up for the consideration of the present session of Legislature receive the consideration which it is due, his route will be continued through north of Aziscoos Mountain, up the Richardson Pond valley into Franklin County at the head of the Cupsuptic Lake, a distance of twelve miles, connecting Route 144 and 107 to all points in eastern Maine. This would divert much traffic from some of the more travelled highways and make a much pleasanter drive for many thousands of tourists who are entering Maine each season.

This route would shorten the distance between Portland and the Rangeleys by quite a few miles. It would broaden the tourist business between the northern Oxford and Franklin counties and continue towards Moosehead Lake, making Route 26 both an interstate and county road, and one of the most important routes in the state indeed.

The importance of this connecting link cannot be over-estimated. Thousands of tourists would use this completed circuit to make the circle of the state, and not be obliged to travel back over the same route, as this would mark the completion of one of the largest circles of our third class roads which will soon be put in use using roads that the state has already invested much money in and not receiving the benefit thereof.

EMPLOYERS AND TAXPAYERS

The gas and electric industries of the United States give direct employment to about 500,000 men and women.

Their payrolls exceed $600,000,000 a year, all of which flows into the channels of trade where it creates more payrolls, more jobs, more industrial activity.

In 1931 the gas companies of the country paid over $76,000,000 in taxes and the electric companies paid $210,000,000. This means that they paid 10.5 cents out of every dollar grossed by selling electricity, 9.6 of every dollar coming from manufactured gas, and 7.2 cents in the case of natural gas.

For every consumer receiving electric service, the industry pays, in taxes, $8.60 a year. For every manufactured gas consumer it pays the government $4.23, and for every natural gas consumer, $4.66.

Rates have dropped steadily since the earliest days of these industries. Electric rates, in particular, are far below the 1913 level, even though costs of all kinds, including labor and taxes, are far higher. Even during the recent boom, when prices skyrocketed, electric and gas rates continued their downward curve.

By the same token, service has seen a thousand improvements. Where we once obtained unsatisfactory electric service, at a high price, from a small local plant, we now obtain cheap, abundant power, at all times, from an inter-connected system serving many communities. Interruptions of service are practically unknown.

The figures show, better than argument, how much these industries mean to American industry, to the American home, and to the development of our civilization.

I'd Rather Read Poetry
BY HENRY DAVIS NADIG

A CHILD INTERPRETS

I

When fields are christened green and gently warmed,
And all things reawaken with new grace.
When sheep have lambed, and brooks have quickened pace,
And with sweet care forget-me-nots are formed
He comes to you with bulletins of birds
And beasts, and, fingers plucking at your knee,
Makes talk of snowy flocks and friendly herds,
Or some new silken nest spun in a tree!
...Then leave your task, the needle in the seam;
And follow him before the dew is dry
Upon the little meadow of his dream,
And see earth through the bright lens of his eye,
With love and wonder. Through his tender ears
Listen to song with ecstasy and tears.

II

For here is one well lettered in the laws
Writ by the ants, those persons of affairs,
And here is one who intimately shares
Their fortunes, and is bold to plead the cause
Of timid mouse or mole, since he has sat
Most gravely in their courts, above, below,
And spoken like a golden diplomat,
Ambassador without portfolio
And he an lead you to the king and queen
Of Faery, the friendly foreign powers,
And show you how their parliaments convene
With hum of bees and eloquence of flowers—
All these and more he'll help you understand
If you will take the earnest of his hand.

Amanda Benjamin Hall.

If the editors of "Connecticut Poets" (Henry Harrison) intended that this anthology should reveal the poets' Connecticut, as it hinted in the foreword, they have miserably failed. If, on the other hand, the editors merely sought to present representative work of poets who live in this state or have made a home here at some time or other, they have succeeded in compiling a large group of poems that except for a dozen instances at the most might have been written by poets of any other state but the one in question. Some of these poets, however, are indigenous nutmeggers and I have no statistics at hand to prove that many of the contributors pass but a small, if any part of their time in the state. Clinton Scollard winters in Florida. Roselle Montgomery lives in Baltimore, Dorothy Byard spends most of her time in Worcester, though one occasionally sees her in Silver Mine, which spot I am sure she loves. Wilbert Snow has recently published a book which marks him as a Downeaster. Marion Canby will feel the brisk wind at the corner of College and Chapel streets this Winter. And in naming these few I am listing those poets which together with a few others in the book could contribute essentially Connecticut verse. That should have been the idea of the anthology. Verse that reveals the life, people and landscape of the state could then be called rightly a Connecticut anthology. Anyone who picks up this book and says Well, let's see what I can learn of Connecticut from her poets, will be astounded at the lack of communication. They will find poems on Italy, France, Germany, the Orient, love, death—there are more poems on death in this book than on any other subject, the sea, flowers, trees, birds, a few on children, one or two on motherhood. Even the frail arbutus suffers for want of sufficient attention. And what is more astonishing there is not a single poem on stone walls; they are mentioned only four times, and then but once descriptively. Connecticut has, I believe, more stone walls than any other state. Can the poets afford to ignore this? I don't believe it. Perhaps it was overlooked by the editors. Such a thing is not unlikely, for the anthology obviously made no attempt to give much, if any, of the Connecticut scene. Nevertheless, the book proves one thing, that Connecticut poets can write in universal mood. They are not at least narrow or bigoted.

The value of the book therefore is not so much as a mouthpiece for the beauty of scene and experience of people in Connecticut. Take the title off and it is just another anthology. Its value lies in that it may be a stimulus to the people of the state to read more poetry written by their neighbors. It also may help bring to light what latent nutmeg verse might be hidden in obscurity either among the stone-walled slopes of the interior or along the rock-jagged coast.

The sea poems are not specific enough in this collection. There are so many great sea poems that unless new poetry is especially fine in detail of picture and mood it carries little weight. Mrs. Montgomery's "Winter by the Sound" is one of the best here. But Wilbert Snow's two pieces "Advice to a Clam-digger" and "Impressions" take the lead. The former is beautiful and complete in its well chosen specific detail. The editors did well to include in their selection from Mrs. Canby's poems "But First I Saw Them Live." I do not think they did so well in the case of Dorothy Byard, though "Iron-clad" is one of her best. A poem reminiscent in mood of New England, though not specific of Connecticut, is a very lovely sonnet by Caroline Parker Smith, "New England Elm Trees."

By stone walls of New England farms, we know,
There is a custom for the bride and groom,
To plant two elm trees that for years may bloom
Before the home...an elm for each to grow
For centuries through rain and wind and snow
Guarding their children's children. These trees loom
Against bleak skies, and valiantly resume
The guardianship of men who come and go.
Never I watch a country road unfold
To see a farm house with its large elm trees
But I am silenced by the sight of these—
Thinking upon the incidents untold
Their boughs have shielded through soft singing leaves—
Soul-secrets from unsheltered days of old.

Other poems which are first rate contributions to the work of the volume are "Solitary Crystal" by Winifred Welles, "The Lilac Sea" by Clinton Scollard, "Second Thought" and "Tryphena" by Jessie B. Rittenhouse, "Ex-Soldier" by Edward Kilerin, "Wild Strawberries" by Harold Willard Gleason, "The Drowning of a Little Town" by Hollis Myron French, "The Tempest" by Lee Wilson Dodd, and "New London" by Grace Stuart Orcutt. There are many poems which are not fine poetry, there is some bad grammar and poor technique. But there are a number of good lyrics and now and then a finished sonnet.

The poem which heads the column I chose from the book as being the most original in appeal, diction and effect.

CITY STUNT FOOLS WARNED

The serious accident on Mt. Washington last week renews our opinion expressed last winter when two young men lost their lives on our famous mountain and the third a patient at the hospital in Whitefield for several weeks, that parties should not be allowed to climb Mt. Washington in winter, and which is treacherous at all times of the year, without a proper guide. It makes no difference if city people are used to climbing mountains in summer it is not a good reason why they should undertake the feat in winter when the hazards are so great. Local people hesitate to do the stunt and visitors should be protected.

Many Planning for Silage

January is the month for seed catalogues. Long before the "backbone of winter is broken" plans are under way for the spring seedings in gardens and fields. During the coming months a good deal of thought on 1933 seedings should be given by all dairymen.

With the short hay crop cutting down on the carry over, it will be good judgment to plan for increased use of the annual legumes that proved of such great help last season. Both seed and fertilizer prices will be attractive this year and enable those men who do not have sufficient manure to cover new fields, to apply complete fertilizer profitably.

Of particular interest to feeders this year was the return to the growing of silage corn on many farms where this crop has been dropped from the rotation for four or five years. With the tendency toward overstocking on many farms, the importance of plenty of silage is recognized. Those areas that were worst hit by the dry weather have found the silage a life-saver in bringing the heifers through in good growing condition at little cash expense, and have been able to piece out the scant hay supply with home-grown silage advantageously.

There may be arguments for abandoning the silo on many farms where few cows are kept and the labor is all done by the owner. The general opinion of those dairymen in Herd Improvement work has been to use the silo more rather than less during periods of low milk prices. If the new year should bring an unsettled condition in the market that would further depress prices, the man with the full silo will not feel the pinch so quickly or so keenly as those who have depended on hay alone.

"Make your plans now to plant a little more than your needs of silage for 1933.

THOUGHTS FOR THE NEW YEAR

By Mrs. F. E. Harriman

The New Year is before us
With unknown joys and fears
But Christ's promise is as precious
As in the bygone years—
"Lo, I am with you always,"
We take Thee at Thy word.
Thine eye marks the way before us,
Thine hand, our footsteps guide,
No ill can e'er befall us
Whilst Thou art by our side.
Fearless we face the future
And try to do our best;
The task begun will soon be done
For none may dare molest.
If darkness overshadows
We firmly hold Thy hand,
And trust Thy guidance ever
Though we may not understand.
Oh, future that awaits us,
We would be true and strong
That right, and peace and plenty
May overthrow the wrong.

New England Recreation

Work Started for Coming Season

The New England Council, all-New England development organization, will help build New England business in 1933 with a $75,000 recreational advertising campaign designed to bring dollars into New England from other parts of the country and put them into circulation in these six states.

This announcement was made here today by Dudley Harmon, Executive Vice President of the Council. The advertising campagn, Mr. Harmon's announcement said, will be designed to stimulate summer recreation in New England, which in normal times contributes some $500,000,000 to New England's income.

The Council's 1933 advertisng campaign is already under way, it was announced, starting with a full cover page in the January issue of Rotarian, organ of the Rotary International. The International Rotary conventon will be held in Boston next June, and the Council is cooperating closely with Rotary in promoting a large attendance. The Council will also concentrate heavily on persuading visiting Rotarians to spend their vacations in New England, while here for their convention.

This year's recreational advertising and publicity campaign will be under the supervision of Colonel William A. Barron of Crawford Notch, N. H., Chairman of the Council's Committee on Recreational Development. It will be financed by subscriptions from business, transportation and recreation interests, largely members of the New England Council, and from individuals interested in promoting recreational travels and vacations in New England. Pledges for a substantial portion of the campaign finances are already in hand, and committees are now canvassing major interests.

This will be the Council's second annual recreational advertising campaign. Last year the Council spent some $40,000 in selling New England as a recreational area. So successful was this campaign that it was decided this year practically to double the financial objective.

Money brought into New England and spent here by visitors from elsewhere is especially important in strengthening New England's business structure. Recreational money is a staunch support of the purchasing power of farmers and others in our rural areas, and this fact is reflected benefically upon all business Especially retail and wholesale distributors benefit, as statistics show, from the trade stimulated by the three million recreational travelers who annually visit New England. This is significant and helpful to banks and manufacturers. The latter also benefit through the growing custom of selling direct from company retail stores to travelers. Another important contribution to general business stability by the recreation industry is in the form of taxes. Recreational property in the six New England states pays annually some $5,000,000 in local taxes. the New England Council researches indicate. This is a relief to other forms of property. Finally, increased recreational business serves in a measure as unemployment relief, through providing employment. The visitor's dollar permeates the entire business and social structure of the community. Recreational income is especially important when our industries are depressed. For these reasons the New England Council will make the promotion of increased recreational travel to New England from other parts of the country one of its major projects in 1933.

WHERE WATER PAYS THE STOCKHOLDERS

The public generally doesn't associate a railroad president with such commonplace things as water for locomotive boilers or scale on engine fire boxes and boiler tubes.

But President Gray of the Union Pacific System, has made public a story which indicates that his knowledge of railroads goes far beyond swivel chair management. He shows that railways have saved millions of dollars as the result of chemical treatment of water to prevent rust and scale. This saving has been reflected in the cost of transportation, dividend payments and in safety. No factor bears a greater part in the economical operation of locomotives, than water. Mr. Gray points out that the railroads use annually as much water as is required by the city of New York or Chicago for one year.

New England affords the best natural water supply for steam locomotives, while the poorest supply comes from the central-western and plain states where water contains more mineral substances. Formation of a scale only one-sixteenth of an inch thick on the surface of a fire box or boiler tube, necessitates 15 per cent more fuel to generate steam. Some years ago on one of the transcontinental railroads the life of a flue was only 35,000 miles in certain localities, although the general average was from 60,000 to 80,000 miles, depending upon the class of locomotive. Flues on passenger locomotives today, on the same railroad, last from 250,000 to 300,000 miles. Some saving!

This increased efficiency is the result of "water treatment" and is but one of the many interesting savings resulting from scientific use of water, that help make the locomotives of this nation run better and longer. This is an interesting example of the research work which has been applied to this great industry to produce economies and improvements which have been of great benefit to the workman, the investor and the traveling public.

MITCHELLIZED SCRAPBOOK PHILOSOPHY

Life rarely proceeds just as we plan it—there will be variations, usually.

Intelligent diligence. What two words could express more?

Only a fool—or a very brave person—makes a daily practice of telling the truth. Now and then is sufficiently disastrous.

Being "stuck up" pays no profit. The peacock of today may be the feather-duster of tomorrow.

This is no time for Rip Van Winkle. Awaking from even a brief nap one would find conditions so changed that his own methods would be useless.

Imagination ain't thinkin'; it's sort of grousin' around about somethin' you'd like the world to be. Thinkin's sort of different. Thinkin's tryin' to find out what the world is.

Most of the good things we think about end up in ifs.

The world that I would think ideal, would be a world that would provide three square meals a day and work that I would like to do and a woman for a wife that I would like to have around and time to rest up for more work. Give me this and I'll be glad to hang around a long time.

A common mistake is that a great man must be great in everything.

Luck does not come by invitation; it drops in casually or not at all.

Most men can be controlled by a few kind words and a good beef stew, with plenty of gravy in it.

—"Old Doc" Mitchell.

The Convict Ship

By Frederick Marshall Davis

If I was asked what I thought of Portland, Maine, I would say—Portland is a nice city, it is a city of culture and the best in music and it is supervised by clean American people.

It was my good fortune to be called there recently for a few days stay. Naturally enough and having a little time to myself, I paid a visit to the waterfront and could but notice that the docks and harbor in general—show the effects of the prevailing word—depression.

The sun shown brightly that day while a stiff breeze ruffled the surface and white-caps were breaking beyond the breakwater and out through the channel that lead to open sea. "This is a convict ship," were the words that rang in my ears as I looked with interest at the officer in blue who had just accosted me.

I noticed these words "The Convict Ship" that stood out plain and bold that were attached to the ship's foremast, while the bow of the vessel was graced by the perfect form of a woman and being well painted, as it was, I should say, for a guess, that it was carved in wood. "That ship looks like an Italian Bark?" I said as I noticed the cross-spar on each mast that denoted that she was of the old type and what is known as a square-rigger.

"Your guess was very good," the officer said, as he related to me that she was a barkentine. The officer seemed ready and willing to talk and listened while he went on to tell a bit of the ship's history.

"She has been here on exhibition since July 12th." he said—"She is in charge of Capt. Woollen, she was built of teak wood in 1790 and was used to move convicts from England to Australia and the same planking is in her now, just as it was the day she slid down the ways to take her maiden voyage."

She belonged to the British Government and I was surprised when I learned that she was to be part of the attraction at the World's Fair that is to be held at Chicago in 1933 and that an admission fee that was paid by all who had gone on board during the summer was missing and stranded—as she was—waiting orders when later she would take her departure, the ship having been victimized the accumulation of six hundred dollars having been taken by a thief who had carried away the money.

The docks—in general—looked forsaken, the old-time spirit is not there, it had been a short term of years since I last visited the place and I could see a vast difference. The Canadian National Grain elevators were laying idle and I was told that if the Canadian water-way project is carried out, it would sadly damage every port along the Atlantic coast.

A squad of Casco Bay Island steamers were huddled together a short distance away and although—having been condemned, they are waiting for spring and the summer season.

A small army of longshoremen with ware-house trucks were chasing each other in and out of a New York freighter to help unload merchandise of various kinds and colors.

"We would be glad to have you come on board any Sunday or holiday," a voice said to me—as I stood near a Patrol Cutter, a government ship known as the Ossipee. Her mission was to patrol or scout along our shores in search of violaters of the law or to answer the call of ships in distress, to watch out for foreign vessels and to chase unwanted ships out of the twelve mile limit.

The words just spoken to me came from a deck hand who started down the gang-plank and stood with me only to disclose some of the important things about the ship. As is common among Uncle Sam's sea-dogs, she was well armed with heavy rifle and machine gun-fire.

Passenger steamers to Boston from this port have taken the count and gone to help fill the pages of ancient history. Passenger service to New York is in progress only for a short period during the summer months each year.

The fishing trade at Portland is a business that is generally good, sea food is always in demand and being abundant the price has been low and tons have been handed out or given away to needy people at the wharves the past season.

Portland does not claim to be much of a manufacturing city but is listed as a commercial center of note and the harbor has always been considered second to none as a New England seaport.

I stood at the Maine State Pier and viewed the ferry-boat as it passed by on its way to Peak's Island and other islands, to take care of the business further down the bay, the splashing of the side-wheels leaving a trail of foam that was plainly visible and was left far behind.

Would say—I thought that going to church in Portland would do me no harm and I went to Munjoy Hill, Sunday, Nov. 20th. to hear the very popular and much talked of Henry Merrill, who is on the air each Sunday morning from 9 to 10:30 a. m. where he holds a Bible study for men that is known as the 13 class. The meeting opened with a band that played a spirited march, quartet numbers were rendered and all strangers were called upon to stand and disclose, to attendants, their home town and were given a rising vote of thanks.

I crossed the million dollar bridge and visited an old hulk that lay high and dry on the beach at South Portland that, if it could speak, I believe it could tell sea yarns that would trim the Robinson Crusoe outfit to a frazzle.

In closing—would say—that within the past few days the Convict Ship has been taken in tow and is assigned to pass through the Panama Canal on her way to exhibit at South American ports and later to continue on her way to Chicago to arrive in time for the big fair the coming year, just what course will be taken to reach Lake Michigan by water the writer is unable to say.

The day was done and I hurried back to the city, to lie down to rest, having gained a true knowledge of God's greatness and the frailities of Man.

ABOUT FACE

There is a vital contribution which we in New England can make at home. This is, that we in New England in state, city and town proceed energetically to put our governmental houses in order and essentially effect reduction in public expenditure. The business men of each state owe this to their own communities.

In each business executives can, and should continue to examine as never before the situation of their own businesses in the light of the facts of present conditions. Not only asset and inventory valuations should be scrutinized, and scaled down to levels consistent with the current situation, but every idea, method and policy, not in keeping with current realities should be revised or eliminated. It should be the determination of every executive for 1933 to do what he can and all that he can with the facts and circumstance of each day, rather than postpone effort until this or that desired change has occurred.

His Glory-Moments

Experiences of "Old Doc" in His Search for Happiness

Each of us has his moment of happiness, but not always from the same cause. That which would bring some souls to the point of ecstacy would not appeal to another, might seem to be inconsequential, even a bore.

I have felt happy when, over in New York, I have heard children singing that lilting song, "The Sidewalks." I have felt a thrill at the memories which the sound of "Rosie O' Grady" brought to my mind. And, awful to relate, I have had a comfortable feeling under my belt after eating an onion sandwich and sipping a glass of beer. (You horrid thing.!)

But one of my glory-moments came when in Savannah, Georgia. During my stay there everyone was kind and courteous to me; they seemed glad that I was there. So when I met a man in the uniform of the master of a ship, who explained that he was a stranger and wished to locate the Federal Building I accompanied him there.

That evening he came to my hotel with his mate and chief engineer; invited me to attend the theatre with him, which I did. After the theatre we had dinner together and over the cigars and....he related some of his experiences at sea.

When ready to return to his ship he invited me to accompany him to the dock. There we found a boatman awaiting. It was one o'clock in the morning and a dense fog floated over the waters of the harbor. He promised that if I would stand and listen they would sing for me, I did and they did, and believe me, Sister, those boys could sing! So, alone on the dock, I stood, hat in hand, and received the vibrations of goodwill and friendship that came to me with the song. When I could no longer see the receding form of the boat, and the sound of the voices grew less and less, my Glory-moment came to me.

Our path through life is marked by a series of little steps and stumbles, but each of us can, if we keep in a receptive mood, have our moments of happiness and—impart to others some little part of what we ourselves enjoy.

—Frank E. Mitchell.

The words, "Flowery Orange" or "Flowery Orange Pekoe" on tea labels have nothing to do with flowers or oranges, but designate the size of the tea leaf, according to tea experts of the Federal Food and Drug Administration. India, Java, Ceylon, and Sumatra teas are separated by machine into five grades: Flowery Orange Pekoe, Orange Pekoe, Pekoe, Pekoe Souchong, and Souchong. Flowery Orange Pekoe consists of the tenderest leaves from the tip end of the tea plant, Souchong represents the coarsest large tea leaf, and the others are grades in between. Mixtures of these grades are called Orange Pekoe Blend, Pekoe and Orange Pekoe, etc.

MY BEST CLERK

"My Ad in the 'Advertiser' is my best clerk" said a local merchant recently.

"Why, because ---

He sees more people.

He tells them in a few words what I sell and what the price is.

He is always on he job, never late and never worries about the fifty-four hour law.

He never gets "peeved" and antagonizes a customer.

He works cheaper than any clerk I can hire.

The more work I give him the better he does it.

I could not do business without him."

Creatures Queer

The Echidna or Porcupine Ant Eater.

If you will pull on your seven league boots we will just stroll over to Australia for a few moments and find a queer creature that looks a little like our own prickly porcupine.

To begin with he is called a Porcupine Ant Eater. You can see the sharp spurs on his back and tail. He can raise these and roll himself into a ball when he is frightened, just as our porcupines do. When rolled up he looks just like a great chestnut burr,

He never has to go to the dentist, for he has no teeth! But he does have the longest tongue you can imagine, and with the tip, which is rather sticky, he picks up unlucky ants and other insects and grubs.

His eyes are very small indeed, and his ears do not show at all. His legs are short and the fore paws are not divided into separate toes, but claws come directly out of the end of the paw. You can see how extraordinary his hind feet are. Perhaps you think the artist made a mistake and drew his feet upside down or backside to, but that is the way they really look. You see, he is something of an engineer. He digs tunnels very often, so in what more satisfactory way could his feet be made for kicking out dirt and stones as he goes along?

On the bank of a small river down on Cape Cod, while the summer tide pulls the water from the river out to the sea, there is the strangest sight. The little beach below suddenly begins to move and glide swiftly out after the water. You have seen tall grasses so swept by the wind that the whole field seemed to roll along? Well, that is what this sandy beach appears to be doing.

But this is what really happens, for of course no favorite beach would ever think of running away. Hundreds and hundreds of small crabs

The little beach below suddenly begins to move and glide swiftly out after the water. You have seen tall grasses so swept by the wind that the whole field seemed to roll along? Well, that is what this sandy beach appears to be doing.

But this is what really happens, for of course no favorite beach would ever think of running away. Hundreds and hundreds of small crabs that live in little holes in the sand just at the edge of the high water have come out of their holes all at once and are running as fast as they can down over the wet beach in search of a little lunch. Their fat bodies move closely together and cover the sand entirely, making the beach seem truly alive.

They hurry on, stopping every now and then to wave one claw frantically in the air. Perhaps they are signaling to one another—inviting a friend to lunch, but as soon as you are close enough to examine them you will discover at once who they are, and then it is easy to guess the rest. They are Fiddler Crabs. One claw has grown very, very large, while the other is small. The large claw is the fiddle, of course, and the other the bow.

Fiddler Crab is just their every day name. When one of them appears in print or on exhibition, like many other musicians he adopts a stage name, and is called Signor Uca Gelasimus Pugilator. No doubt that makes him feel more important.

FIDDLER CRABS OUT PLAYING TAG

As a family, Fiddler Crabs are very highly strung, which means they are just the least bit nervous. When you lean down to listen to their tunes, they get a dreadful fright and, running sidewise, each one dashes into the nearest hole he can find, regardless of whether it is his own or not! Sometimes two or three squeeze into the same hole, only to be inhospitably pulled out by the rightful owner when he arrives.

Twin State Forum

Men's Meeting Held Sunday Afternoons at Curtis Hall, Fryeburg

The first of a series of men's meetings known as the "Twin State Forum" was held at Curtis Hall in Fryeburg last Sunday afternoon with an attendance of about fifty men from six communities.

The speaker of the afternoon was J. Dunton Sharman who spoke along national lines. C. E. Fritze of Fryeburg acted as chairman of the meeting. S. B. Vinton was in charge of the music. The meeting was opened with prayer by Rev. H. G. Booth. Among the high points in Mr. Sharman's address were his declaration that no nation can maintain a height of civilization above the social standards of its populace. In defence of this he drew from the history of Egypt, Greece and Rome. America was pointed out as the only nation to have world leadership forced upon her, and was warned that history might repeat itself in her downfall unless the masses and government were brought in closer sympathy.

The speaker named the American social, industrial, economic, political and religious institutions as the bulwarks of our national life, but discussed only the social problem at this meeting. He deplored the lowered standards of home and community life, and the increasing unemployment.

In closing the speaker claimed that America is looking into the crator of a human volcano that will burst into communisic, nation wide eruption within three years unless the government secures the sympathy and co-operation of the masses through relief of present hardships and justifiable grievances.

Next Sunday

This coming Sunday, January 22, at 2:30 at Curtis Hall, Fryeburg, Lieut J. Dunton Sharman will speak on "American Practice of Law," and it is hoped men from all the surrounding towns will make it a point to be present and enjoy this free men's meeing.

The Forum

A few weeks ago a number of men in Fryeburg held a consultation and talked over the matter of holding a Forum, Sunday afternoons. The plan seemed advisable and the men set to work. It was decided to call the gathering the "Twin State Forum," meaning Maine and New Hampshire. Curtis Hall, Fryeburg Academy, Fryeburg was selected as the place of holding the Forum, and the time, each Sunday afternoon, at 2:30. Among those interested in forming the forum were Rev. H. G. Booth, E. R. LaCasce of Fryeburg, Rev. Clifford Cross, George Coe, Lovell, Mr. Blanchard, North Conway, Rev. E. Doughty of Bridgton and Mr. Stickney of Brownfield and others. It is the plan to hold these gatherings for the men during the winter at least, with some outstanding speaker. The first meeting found fifty in attendance and so interested have the men become that a larger number is assured for the coming Sunday. The goal is to increase the attendance from all towns round about and make the gatherings of interest and help as many as possible in presenting timely topics for discussion. Men only.

Hereafter the Maine and New Hampshire Stage will use Ashton's Drug Store for passenger headquarters. The daily schedule for Norway and other information appears in another column of this paper. Better look it up among the ads.

Dr. C. R. Aldrich of Brattleboro, Vermont, died in that city last Monday. He has been one of our Middledam fishing friends, companion and medical advisor for years. He has been in failing health for a long time. He was about 55 years old.

Charles Herrick, machinist, has made us a present. We prize it more than a ten acre farm in Yaggar. It is a hand forged sheath-knife of proper form, shape and temper for making of first-class cedar shavings. It will be the envy of all the Weary whittlers at the club for days to come.

A. E. Cole, section foreman at Oxford, has broken the record for swimming of anyone we know of around here. He has been in swimming once or twice every month ever since last May. His last swim was the 16th of January, 1933, which made the second swim for January. He swims across the Little Androscoggin river each time.

Men only—see the ad in this issue, calling attention to the Men's Forum at Curtis Hall, Fryeburg, next Sunday afternoon at 2:30 when Lieut. J. Dunton Sharman will speak on "American Practice of Law." Men are wanted to attend from all sections of the surrounding towns. These Sunday afternoon gatherings are proving popular and very interesting.

There will be no Governor's Ball this year. That "biggest social event of the legislative season in past years" will not be held in 1933. The committee acceded to the Chief Executive's request and the plans for the ball have been cancelled. Gov. Brann asked that the ball be abandoned and the funds usually available for that purpose be used for general relief work.

Thanks for sending in these items regarding former Oxford County people. We are glad to print them. Our readers are interested in reading them. This week Miss Margaret A. Baker of Portland, a former Norway and Waterford resident sent us the obituary of Mrs. H. Emilie Hamlin, a native of Waterford. It was sent her from California, having been sent there from Massachusetts. It was thoughtful for her to send it in and we appreciate it.

The Somerville Journal reports the election of officers of Emanuel Church parish, the name of Fred I. Farwell is mentioned as one of the wardens. This will make his tenth year. Mr. Farwell is a native of Bethel where his brother, Merton and other relatives, reside. He attended Gould Academy, became interested in rubber stamps and type. Eventually he drifted to Somerville, Mass., where he built up a job printing and rubber stamp industry. For some years he has been interested in the Episcopal Church and was a lay reader.

What will Charles Jenness of Rochester, N. H. think of this? We recently received a letter with these comments:

"These eccentric annual messages indicate Charles' mental machinery was assembled for the purpose of making men 'good' instead of sensible and useful."

Here is another reaction coming from West Concord, N. H., to wit:

"Mr. Jenness' Christmas sermon is good for all of us. I am keeping that among my treasures for future reference. Many thanks to you."

Here we have a difference of opinion or liking expressed in writing. Take your choice.

Don C. Seitz says:

"Was glad to see that Donald Partridge had the good sense and courage to vote against the Farm Allotment Bill, one of the grossest pieces of state socialism ever devised and which is sure to produce mischief far beyond remedy.

"As an able legal friend of mine puts it: 'Plan is strictly class. Legislation unsound in its conception and application, and must carry ruin and disaster in its wake. Sponsers either men wanting in knowledge and experience and ability to envision the future and the consequence of their acts, or are corruptly motivated; seeking to curry favor to keep themselves in office, or to reap a direct pecuniary benefit for themselves. In a period of world deflation why should one class of individuals—of property owners be exempted from the deflation?'"

"Buy or Borrow a Copy"

Yes, that is just what folks do, some buy and some borrow. The sum total of the readers of one edition of the Advertiser is easily estimated at 10,000. Many incidents come to our attention where the paper is read by whole families and loaned to other families, until it has been read by lots of people. Here is an interesting example of how the Advertiser travels. A party in a nearby town, writing in the other day, said:

I read my paper, then a nearby family reads it, then it is handed to Mr. ——, and then he brings it to a lady nearby and she reads it and sends it on to her mother, who lives in another town.

This is O. K., we are glad to know the paper is doing good service. Keep up the good work.

Are there not others like the first person who would like to subscribe for the Advertiser, price $2.00 per year, and when through reading, loan it to your friends who may be less fortunate than you.

Goings On In Maine

By L. G. C.

Last week was not such a busy week in Augusta; the second week of the Legislature is never very busy...It is the "get acquainted week," the new members learn "who's who" and "what's what" about the old members, and vice versa.

Some bills were put in the hopper last week which laid the ground work for some of the important legislation that is going to be put through this winter; these bills were promptly referred to the various committees for consideration, and committee hearings will start this week.

These committee hearings are the "side show" to the Legislature; and as oftentimes the "side show" is the best part of a circus, so too, these committee hearings are often the most interesting, spectacular, and spicy of any part of the session of the legislature.

The committees are pretty well organized now; a week ago the Speaker of the House and President of the Senate announced the membership of the different committees; and last week the clerks (who draw a salary from fifty dollars to eight hundred dollars per session) were appointed by the committees.

A few of the more important clerkships were: Legal Affairs Committee, which went to Kenneth Lee of Winthrop; Taxation Committee, which went to Aileen Burr of Millinocket; Ways and Bridges Committee, which went to Irving Case of Lubec; and the Education Committee, which went to Maud McIntosh of Fort Fairfield.

A booklet, giving the names, home town address, Augusta address, phone number, seat number, and committee assignments of all the members of the House and Senate will be furnished you, without cost, if you write to your Representative that you would be interested in having a copy.

Town fights which are carried to the Legislature are always interesting, and generally there are fireworks. I well remember the fight the Island of Beals made to get separated from the Town of Jonesport; the fight was carried through more than one Legislature; big delegations from both sections went to Augusta; and often the fight was hot and spicy, with personalities creeping in; but when, finally, in 1923, Beals did gain her battle, the fight was soon forgotten and Jonesporters today will tell you that Beals is not doing a bad job in the administration of its own community.

What has the earmarks of a royal fight this winter, is the attempt of some residents of the town of Islesboro to have this Legislature pass a bill repealing the law passed in 1913, which forbids automobiles from going on the Island. Leading the fight to repeal the law of 1913, is Representative Roy C. Fernald of Winterport; and leading the fight to retain the law is Ex-Representative Jos. A. Pendleton of Dark Harbor. President of the Senate, Harold Murchie, of Calais, has introduced a bill which, if passed, would repeal the present Primary Election laws and return Maine to the Party Convention method of nominating candidates for election. Mr. Murchie explains that the convention would not be like the "old time" conventions, as his bill provides certain measures, such as uniform caucus dates and non-transferable credentials which would cure some of the defects of the old convention system.

Representatives Fernald of Winterport, and Tomkins of Houlton have each introduced bills to license chain stores; the Fernald bill calls for a license fee of $3.00 for the first store up to $25 each for more than twenty stores; the Tomkins bill calls for a fee of $3.00 up to $200. each for over twenty stores.

Among the "lobbyists," registered so far are Frank W. Ball, former Secretary of State, for the Bangor and Aroostook Railroad; C. M. Perkins of Waterville for the M. C. R. R.; Edward F. Wheeler of Brunswick for the B. & M. R. R.; and Edward F. Merrill of Skowhegan for the Central Maine Power Co.

Blaine S. Viles of Augusta, a member of Ex-Gov. Gardiner's Council, and now a Senator from Kennebec County, is strongly urging the more extensive use of one of Maine's own resources, wood, as fuel in some of the State institutions. With the price of coal at about the same price it was five years ago, and with the price of wood about one-half the price of five years ago, and with hundreds of Maine woodsmen anxious for employment, Mr. Viles is finding considerable support for his suggestion.

Alfred K. Ames of Machias is the first to announce himself as a candidate for Governor in 1934. He ran a most unique campaign for the Republican nomination in 1932; made no speeches, but advertised in the newspaper extensively, and campaigned all over Maine, showing moving pictures of the lumber industry on the Machias River. It went over big, Ames got over 30,000 votes in the Primaries and nearly won the nomination over Martin, although he had been practically out of politics for fourteen years.

Senator Herbert Kitchen of Presque Isle, Chairman of the Ways and Bridges Committee, has introduced a bill which is in line with the policy advocated by Governor Brann in his inaugural address, which would cause the highway department to operate on its own receipts without any special appropriation by the Legislature; by suspending for two years, at least, the mill tax highway fund, and the $300,000 highway "pork barrel" measure. This is one of the most important bills presented thus far this session, with a view to economy; and this one bill alone, if passed, will make up about one-third of the shrinkage in the State's income.

Now comes the University of Maine, and say they can run their institution for $160,000.00 per year less than formerly. Who's next?

KEZAR FALLS

The Scheik test will be given to all the children who had the diphtheria immunization last summer at the Methodist Church, Kezar Falls, on Jan. 24th, at 10-11 a. m. This will be the only opportunity to have this test so all parents are urged to have their children who had the toxoid present at that time.

They are to return on Thursday a. m. to have the test read.

Taxation and Laws

By R. L. Cummings of West Paris

Thinking over my little talk before Norway Grange, Saturday, I think there were some things I omitted, in regard to taxation that I should have said. This may often happen where one speaks without notes or previous preparation; So perhaps my friends will just consider this as a postscript.

The great question is, how can we raise money to pay the already overgrown debts on our town, state and nation, and at the same time maintain our institutions at a respectable standard.

From the condition of the farmer and small property owner it is plain that we must look to new sources of revenue. I am told on apparently good authority that there is in Maine approximately $700,000,000 of intangible property that escapes taxation here. If this property should pay one per cent it would amount to $7,000,000. Our great electric companies that benefit so much from extortionate rates that they are able to pay 19-1-2 per cent on their common stock that I believe did not represent any investment to the company at all and aside from that could, according to report, turn over more than $300,000 to their holding company and in return receive the payment of $200,000 to attempt to carry an election in our state. In all reason and justice they should be subjeced to taxation in proportion to their property and their ability to pay.

In addition to this we must cut out non-essentials. I will mention one that I think should have an emphatic trimming.

By a State law we had thrust upon us a superintendent of schools over whom we seem to have very little control and no means of obtaining accurate knowledge of his expenditures that we have to pay in taxes, through our town reports or the selectmen. At our last March meeting I asked for informaion that would give me these facts, and received the information that they could not tell for the accounts were not passed through their hands but went direct to the printer from the school authorities.

As near as I can learn the expense of our superintendent and his office in round numbers would be $5,000. I was interested to know the entire school budget was about the last year that I went to school and I found it to have been $5,500 for the town of Paris. Up to a period later than that we had competent men to serve in that position that I believe were not inferior to any that serve us now, and if my memory serves me right if they brought in bills in excess of $75.00 to $200.00 for the towns of Paris and Woodstock they had a whole lot of explaining to do on town meeting day. I have no means at hand of knowing just what the expense of this supervision is to the entire State but it is a very large sum, and I think we have all learned that although we say the "State" pays a large part of it, that in fact we pay it all in the long run.

It would seem very questionable if a town who had not a suitable citizen within its borders, or could not select one from some other town who could competently care for its schools, could be considered an up-to-date New England town. To make such an assertion would surely be a tremendous charge to bring against our good citizenship as well as our school system.

The law that imposes the present system of supervision should be repealed and a law enacted that will allow towns having these schools to choose their own superintendents.

WATERFORD

Mrs. H. Emilie Hamlin

The death of Mrs. H. Emilie Hamlin occured December 12th. at the home of her son, Dr. William E. Hamlin in Waltham, Mass. Mrs. Hamlin was the widow of Dr. Edward L. Hamlin. In her earlier days, when her husband was one of the well known local dentists, Mrs. Hamlin was always present to assist in his office and many recall her kindly manner and encouragement when they were being treated at the office.

Born in Waterford, Maine, February 7th, 1843, Mrs. Hamlin was the daughter of William and Harriett Kilgore Mc-Wain and has many friends in Norway and Waterford among the older residents. She has been a resident of Waltham for many years and was a charter member of the Waltham Woman's Club in which she has kept an active interest almost to the end of her life. She was also an active member of the Church of Our Saviour, Universalist, where her kindly cordiality will be remembered especially by the strangers who chanced to attend its meetings. Fairs, church suppers, missionary meetings and all activities in the church received her help and support. She was also a member of the Sons and Daughters of Maine.

Besides her son, Dr. William E. Hamlin, and one grandchild, Mrs. Hamlin leaves a sister-in-law, Mrs. Daniel W. McWain of Watertown, and several nieces including Mrs. Elsie Evans of Wellesley, Mrs. Edith Spellman of Newton Centre, and Mrs. Ruby Winsor of Watertown, and a nephew D. Ernest McWain of Wellesley.

The funeral was held at her late home and burial took place in the family lot in Grove Hill Cemetery at Waltham.

Paris High 47 - Oxford 27

Bill Ledger's scrappy basketeers from Oxford High School put up a good fight with Hank Small's outfit at South Paris gym Friday night, but lost to the heavier team 47 to 27.

The visitors opened with a rush and tossed a string of ringers before South Paris got underway. Oxford led 12-3 at the quarter. From then on Paris snapped into the game and soon was leading with a safe margin.

During the early stages Oxford had a keen eye on the hoop and outpointed the locals in percentage of accurate shots. When Paris found the range, the shooting was deadly and floor baskets piled up.

The foul whistle figured prominently and both teams had many free tries on the mark. Only seven points from this source were secured by each outfit.

In the preliminary game the Oxford girls finished victorious with a score 50-46. This was fast and close, especially during the final quarter when the teams shifted places as leaders several times.

The anchorage is the Purpose and Promise of God. The cable is believing prayer. We need to be anchored to the infinite for wisdom, guidance and strength. We need this anchor for the sake of poise and health of both body and mind. God is in His universe. He is always within our reach. His power sustains us and can be appropriated in sufficient measure for every need. His wisdom can be obtained and His love can be experienced; all through the medium of believing prayer; and by this means every soul may be anchored to the Infinite."
